

Experiential Learning Methodologies addressing vulnerable employed and unemployed people

ABOUT ELMET

In today's labor markets, which are living exponential transformations that have a cross-cutting impact on practically all sectors and occupations, continuous training, c-VET, becomes a key tool.

Training gaps have a quantifiable negative impact on the employment opportunities of workers, and especially in people with a lower educational level, who are exposed to almost twice as likely to be unemployed with the economic and social loss that this implies.

One of the elements that most affect the success of a training initiative aimed at workers and unemployed people with lower qualifications is the pedagogical approach and the applied methodology. Andragogical approaches and methodologies for experiential and creative learning are placed at the centre of the stage to enable the design and delivery of innovative, motivating, and c-VET that allows the development of the so-called transversal skills of the 21st century (problem solving , communication, critical thinking, etc.)

OBJECTIVES OF THE PROJECT

ELMET projects main objective is to contribute to the development of innovative and updated c-VET opportunities by developing a set of resources, in the form of a complete TOOLKIT that enable c-VET trainers and experts to design and use the educative Escape Games (including digital escape rooms) as new active learning methodology to develop the key abilities and competences requested from the Changing Working environments.

PROJECT TARGET GROUP

The project main target group are trainers of employed and unemployed people (specially low qualified, long term unemployed, migrants, etc.) and of active professionals that want to recycle their skills and competences to new working environments.

WHAT HAVE WE DONE SO FAR?

On December the 10th, the first virtual meeting was held. As a first contact, the partners planned the development of future project activities. They also agreed on an evaluation of the project, the dissemination strategies, and finally, they made an introduction on the administrative and financial management of the project.

WHAT IS NEXT?

The second meeting will be held in Nicosia (Cyprus) in May 2021 if the conditions are suitable for it, otherwise it will be virtual.
